

The St. Johns taught us cleaner ways to make paper.

Making a better world for everyone around it.

Ten years ago, Georgia-Pacific joined with the EPA and the Florida Department of Environmental Protection to lessen our impact on the environment. To get there, we had to reinvent the way we make paper. Today, more than half of the energy needed to run our mills comes from self-generated, renewable fuels. We've learned a lot. And we have the St. Johns to thank for it.
