

The Georgia-Pacific Bucket Brigade® supports firefighters nationwide with:

- Product & cash donations, as well as volunteers, to help firefighting units
- Continuing education programs & fire safety materials, keeping firefighters and the families they serve safe
- Support of building safety initiatives & continued research into developing safer building materials

The original bucket brigades depended on everyone pitching in to help. Today, there are many ways to help your local fire department:

- Volunteer to help at a fire department fundraising event
- Get your company to donate products or services
- Work with schools to have fire & health safety issues incorporated into the curriculum

Fire prevention is the key to fire safety

- Always have working smoke alarms in your home
- Know two ways of exiting every room in your house
- Practice an escape plan & have a family meeting place outside the home
- Never leave food cooking or candles burning unattended
- Make sure all flammable materials are at least 3 ft. from portable heaters

If you have a fire at home

- Crawl low under the smoke
- Feel the door with the back of your hand; if it's hot, exit another way
- Get out of the house & stay out; do not go back in
- Call 911 from a neighbor's house
- Wait for help at a family meeting place
